Foreword

The Editorial Staff of the "Cadet" wishes to take this opportunity to thank all of those who have helped to make this annual a success.

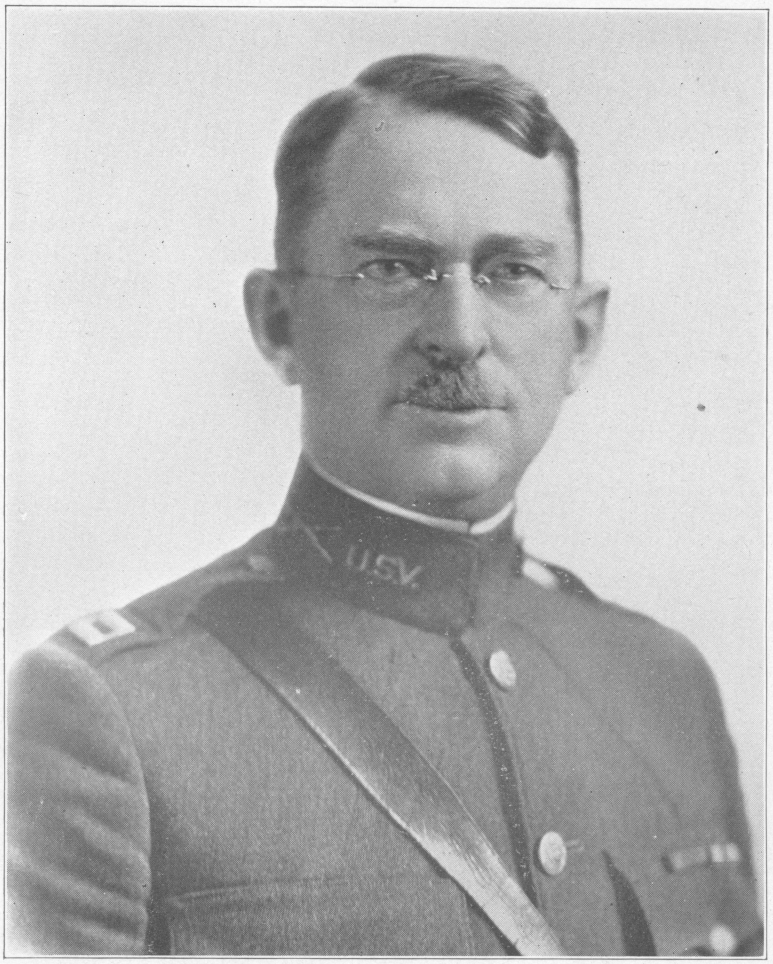

To M. Vernier of the Commercial Print Shop, Mr. O'Neill of the Sunset Engraving Co., and to Mr. Vreeland, the photographer, we wish to offer our sincere thanks.

The Editorial Staff is deeply indebted to the great help, advice and willing co-operation given by Captain Bain, the faculty advisor.

We also wish to extend our thanks to those who have assisted us financially, by giving advertisements—complimentary and otherwise—and we trust that the Cadets will show their appreciation by giving their patronage to these firms.

Just a word to the men who are graduating: We urge you to keep in touch with your Alma Mater through the columns of your school paper, to become permanent subscribers, and send us news of yourselves from time to time, so that your fellow alumni may know of your welfare.

Wishing those who are returning a happy vacation, and godspeed to those who are leaving us.

The President's Farewell to the Seniors

After so many years of school work, it would seem that by this time, I should be accustomed to saying good-bye to Seniors, but such is not the case. Each year, the close contact with a fine group of boys just grasping the problems of young manhood develops a deep personal interest in the individuals of a group like this, and makes me feel that each one of you belongs to me. I believe that in the light of your present experience of life, you can scarcely understand how vitally I am interested in everything that you may do in the future.

If you enter college, I charge you especially to remember that you represent not yourself alone, but your family and the old Academy as well, and that you are on a very serious business, especially during your first semester. In the selection of companions, and in every line of endeavor, we expect that you will acquit yourselves like men, use your best judgment, and keep yourselves clean in body, mind and spirit. May God's richest blessing rest upon each of you!

THOS. A. DAVIS, President

To the Senior Class of 1927

There is one time of the year that I do not like, and that is the time preceding the graduation and the departure of the Senior Class. Not that I do not rejoice with you in the victory you have won in earning your diploma, but because we hate to lose you!

It is always hard for me to say this when talking to you, but to try and express it in writing is really beyond me. I do wish to say, however, that I appreciate the honor I have had in being your Class Advisor, and that my very best wishes go with you wherever you go. We are all expecting great things of you.

Until we meet again—Good-bye!

"THE MAJOR"
