NEW BRAEMAR PHOTOS!

1922

(Above) . One of the rare photos of Braemar, taken from a Christmas card loaned to us by Lenore Carroll. (Left) Another aerial, taken around 1922, loaned to us by the La Jolla Historical Society at the top. Taken from almost the same spot is a 1945 Howard Rozelle aerial. The changes speak for themselves.
